

Irregularities in Public Examinations

Introduction

The Hong Kong Examinations and Assessment Authority (HKEAA) currently administers a large scale public examination, namely the Hong Kong Diploma of Secondary Education Examination (HKDSE). Despite our best efforts, it is not always possible to ensure that public examinations are conducted absolutely smoothly and without incident. When unexpected incidents occur, we have a range of measures to adjust for any consequent unfair advantages or disadvantages of individual candidates. The purpose of this leaflet is to provide information about the general nature of such irregularities and the ways they are dealt with.

Types of irregularity

There is a wide range of types of incidents that can occur and have an impact on candidates' performance in a public examination. For example, candidates may feel that the correct procedures for a particular examination paper were not followed, or that the conditions under which an examination was conducted were not satisfactory. We encourage candidates to raise any concerns on such matters (e.g. poor examination centre environment, excessive external noise) with the invigilation staff immediately so that the concerns can be addressed straightaway, possibly by a change of seating for the candidate. There may also be cases of examination centre staff assisting candidates who are unwell, or finding candidates who have broken the examination regulations or not followed invigilator instructions. Again, we expect examination centre staff to deal with such matters immediately with the candidates involved so as to resolve them as quickly and smoothly as possible.

How to report irregularities?

It may not be possible to satisfactorily resolve all such matters on the spot. In such cases, reports should be made, preferably immediately after the examination, and submitted to the HKEAA for consideration. Candidates may lodge complaints with the centre supervisor at the examination centre, or use an electronic form on the HKEAA website, following procedures given in the Handbook for Candidates. Where examination centre staff have concerns about the conduct of candidates, these will also be reported to the HKEAA by centre supervisors, using a report form that is signed by the candidate(s) involved.

Irregularities handling procedures

Cases brought to the HKEAA's attention with substantiated evidence will be thoroughly investigated and considered. To achieve a good understanding of the cases, HKEAA staff will revert to the individuals involved, to invigilation staff and sometimes also to other candidates who may have relevant information to share, or review the video recordings of the examination as appropriate. All this information is considered in detail by a Standing Committee of the HKEAA. This Standing Committee comprises a number of HKEAA's senior assessment staff. It refers to a set of guidelines which describe normal practices, and makes recommendations to the Public Examinations Board on what action to take for each case. Candidates are informed of the decisions of the Public Examinations Board at the time of release of examination results.

Processing of irregularities

A wide range of possible measures, each judged to be appropriate for the particular circumstances of each case, are employed. Cases of special consideration, where an unfair disadvantage to candidates in terms of impact on their performance is established, may lead to an upward mark adjustment, generally by a small percentage of the maximum mark for the examination paper involved in written examinations. Since mark adjustment is not applicable to speaking examinations, the candidate may only be offered the option to re-sit the examination, and the re-sit score will replace the original score as the final score. In cases where candidates have not followed examination regulations, or have not met examination requirements, a range of penalties from small mark deductions, through downgrading, to possible disqualification, are applied.
