1a) Based on Parasuraman's five service dimensions, the three dimensions that were not met by the robots were Empathy, Responsiveness and Reliability.

The first dimension that were not met is Empathy because from the above evidence one guest was woken up repeatedly when his loud snoring triggered the in-room robot which disrupts the guest's sleep.

The second dimension that were not met is Responsiveness because of the lack of knowledge of the robot when the baggage was sent to the wrong room due to the wrong input of guests.

The third dimension that were not met is Reliability because the robots were taking a long time to make copies of guests' passports which was not quick and effective.

1b) Robots should have a 'sleeping mode' were they are not running while guests' are sleeping and wouldn't be triggered because of loud snores, human staff should handle guests information as they a better knowledge on what to do when an
