Self-Assessment on Individual Presentation

After watching the record of my own individual presentation, I have some reflection on fellow aspects.

Content: the content has sticked to the survey and had made suggestions corresponding to it. For instant, I had given details like percentage and had advices on installing MP3, FM radio MSN and Yahoo Messenger which satisfy the majority of respondants according to the survey.

Nevertheless, I has found that some suggestions are unnecessary. Most of the ideas are already available in the market like MP3 and large built-in memory. Besides, some are impractical. Suggesting a mobile phone with a parallelgram shape is inconvenience to users.

Organization: In a bid to make the presentation, I have divided the presentation into several parts with sub-heading like function, features and appearance. Besides, topic sentences are given. Yet, I am weak in organize the data and simplify it. Thus, it become dull with too much numbers or percentages.

Fluency: In a whole, the presentation is merely fluent. I have hesitated occassionally and speak unnaturally. It seemed that I was nervous at that time. Aside from this, my pronunciation has a large room to improve that words like 'favourable' or 'fashionable' are easily found to have been wrongly spoken.

Vocabulary: In the presentation, I found myself lack in sentence and vocabulary

It made the whole presentation monotonic and be lengthened with inadequate technical or specific vocabularies on mobile phone. For example, I mistakenly described signal receiver as 'a tiny metal rod'.

Communication strategies: I had eye contact but seemed to have no specific focus. In addition, it is unnatural.

To sum up, I have come up with several suggestions to improve my presentation skills. First of all, I should read more books to broaden my knowledge on specific vocabularies. Next, I should learn to summerizing or take notes on texts like newspapers and to read aloud. Moreover, I can oral...practises in front of a mirror or to record it for further improvement. Last but not least, more practises on grammer and sentence parity especially connectives.
